Another gang war brewing in Heywood!

It seems that Heywood continues seeing more than its share of trouble lately.

Last week, we brought you news of the battle between Tyger Claws and 6th street, but it seems that was only the start.

While the details remain unknown, we can confirm the Claws amassed a collection of explosives and fireworks on one of their warehouses in Charter Hill, north of Heywood.
None too happy with such development in their territory, a 6th street cell attacked last night.

The fighting was surprisingly short-lived. 6th street seemed to be preparing to storm the warehouse, but quickly fell back, perhaps due to chatter that Claw's reinforcements were on their way. Interestingly, one bystander reported seeing a Tyger's member making a getaway with a yellow van, to the north. More details will come as we receive them!

More delays on H11 and H12 projects

A spokesperson for the Night City Recovery Department blamed the delay on the difficulty to hire new workers "who don't fall sick all the time"

Renovations announced for the Municipal Sewage Treatment Plant

The treatment facility was where most of Night City's sewage and waste processing went on. The 2023 bombing affected the whole pipe system and the site was deemed too expensive to run. In the past the plant was ran through a system of cronyism that would make a Chicago democrat blush, and was well-known for its regular sewage backfills and toxic emergencies. The current administration on the Night City Sewage department vowed to do better this time as part of their announcement speech.
